Dear WebFX developers Team,

I am excited to apply for the full-time full-stack web developer position on your team. I am a passionate developer dedicated to creating appealing, interactive web apps and a career-changer who has experienced first-hand the transformation power of online learning. I would love to work for WebFX and contribute to the mission of improving and offering clients innovative digital marketing solutions to help them drive revenue for their businesses.

During my 5 years of learning web development, and working as a sales assistant, I redesign our website to a more friendly and appealing for our audiences. I was able to create a full-stack MERN E-commerce platform, which increased our average user traffic and user rating. This experience kindled my passion for full stack web development and taught me to keep the user experience and interaction in mind, and as well as to keep pushing my ability to a new level.

To gain more coding experience, I completed "Udacity's Full-Stack Web Development Nanodegree program, which has taught me Flask, Postgres, and Python, CodeSpace Front-End Web Development program, which has taught me HTML, CSS and JavaScript and self-taught MERN during 2020 lockdown" to develop my own web applications. As of the moment, I am working on E-learning MERN platform with features such as tutors' payments, platform fees, students' enrollment and study progression and many other more.

I hope to bring to WebFX my fresh perspective as a developer and my adaptability and diligence as a career-changer. I am available to meet in person or on a zoom call. I look forward to speaking with you to further discuss my qualifications. Thank you for your consideration.

Best Regards,

Jonathan Bangala.
